SUBJECT: Guidelines for the Warren F. Hardy Distinguished Professorship in English

Applications can now be submitted for the Warren F. Hardy Distinguished Professorship in English. All full-time English faculty members, holding the terminal degree, are eligible to apply.

Description of Professorship: A faculty member may be named to hold this Distinguished Professorship for a two-year term; individuals may serve more than one term, though not consecutively. Holding the Distinguished Professorship calls for the following:

1. Six credit hours of reduced load annually, usually three credit hours per semester.
2. Access to a professional development fund of $2,500 per year. This fund may cover travel, research materials, stipends for guest scholars or visitors, clerical or student assistance, or other appropriate professional costs. The Hardy Professor administers this fund in consultation with the Provost.
3. The person holding this professorship will provide two written reports. The first report will be due at the end of the first year indicating progress towards the goals as stated in the application. A final report will sum up the professional development accomplishment in relation to the professorship. Reports are due to the Dean of Arts and Sciences and to the Provost.

Application for the Professorship:

Formal applications are due the Monday following Thanksgiving (11/30/20) by electronic submission via Interfolio and should include the following items:

- a prospectus of no more than 5 single-spaced pages containing a narrative outlining the proposed study program, its likely results, and the major uses of the professional development fund
- the narrative should additionally include a component that explains how this study potentially gives back or contributes to the discipline as well as to the department or general academic program at Millikin
- a current curriculum vitae, with copies of selected publications and other formal scholarly materials
- two letters of recommendation from professional colleagues, within or beyond the Millikin community
- other supporting materials deemed important by the candidate following consultation with the Dean of Arts and Sciences.

Selection of the Professorship:

1. Applications will be reviewed by the Committee on Scholarship and Faculty Development. Both the proposal's intrinsic merit and the applicant's previous record will be central considerations. Applications for research and pedagogical pursuits will be considered. Please see the Provost Resources website for the rubric that will be used in evaluating the proposals.
2. The Committee will make its recommendations to the Provost, who will convene the committee.
3. The Provost will formally appoint the Warren F. Hardy Professorship for the following two consecutive academic years by letter by the end of the fall semester. Formal announcement of the Professorship will be made at the January or February University Faculty meeting.

Obligations:

Yearly reports of Professorship activities, plans and reflections will be submitted each May to the Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences and the Provost. In addition, at the end of the final year, recipients will be expected to present the outcomes of their professorship to the campus community, in a venue arranged with the Office of the Provost.

All eligible faculty are urged to consider applying for the professorship. This is a valuable opportunity for professional growth and achievement and a very visible way for faculty to demonstrate the importance of scholarly activity to the ongoing renewal of our commitment as a community of learning.
