Executive Summary

In the 2015-16 academic year, the Department of History and Political Science faculty and students again were one of the most active and engaged academic units at Millikin University. Among the myriad of activities that the department sponsored, we welcomed speakers such as Judge Lisa Holder White, who spoke on Constitution Day, and former congressman Tom Ewing, who spoke to Political Science students. The department sponsored student presentations at regional conferences and at our own Celebration of Scholarship, and also participated in the Model Illinois Government and the Model United Nations programs. The Illinois Medieval Conference was held on campus in February, thanks to the leadership of the department, specifically Professor Tim Kovalcik, partnering with the Department of English and Professor Mike George. Professor Kovalcik also led students on a tour of Holocaust sites in Europe, a popular biennial department offering. Hence, we have fulfilled our promise to offer unique opportunities to add value to History, Political Science, and Social Science Education majors. Specifically, with regard to the latter, a combined program meets accreditation requirements of both the ISBE and the NCSS. It also enables the department to offer a content endorsement in political science/government, and our research suggests that more Illinois high schools are advertising for teachers with the government endorsement than any other social science field. Thanks to our partnership with the Department of Education and Professor Christie Magoulias, the department now offers a content endorsement that will help our Social Science Education majors secure jobs after graduation and also attract prospective students to our program. The department had a successful search for a tenure-track position in political science and hired Dr. Laura Dean, PhD University of Kansas. Dr. Dean is an accomplished teacher and scholar in international political science, fluent in Latvian and Russian. We are delighted to have her in our growing program. Our graduating seniors secured jobs or graduate school admission with one exception, a tribute to our program and its ability to place students after graduation.

All History faculty hold doctorates from prestigious graduate programs, both our tenure-line faculty—Dan Monroe, Brian Mullgardt, and Tim Kovalcik—and our adjunct faculty—Bob Sampson. Our Political Science faculty--Amber Lusvardi and Laura Dean--includes adjuncts Michelle Sanders and Scott Reuter. Jennifer Notariano taught for us throughout the academic year and performed ably, but she departed for a full-time job in August 2016. The department is known for outstanding teaching, and, once again, History-Political Science received student evaluation ratings that are above the division, college, and university averages. Our faculty is devoted to student success in the classroom and to performance learning. Indeed, History-Political Science faculty regularly sponsor student presentations and internships, labor-intensive efforts that they willingly embrace. History faculty and Social Science Education students presented papers at the Conference on Illinois History in September 2015. Dan Monroe and Bob Sampson again moderated sessions on Illinois history. Dr. Monroe chaired a session on the American Civil War at which three students, two history majors and one political science major, presented papers, specifically Lauren Nesbitt, Emily Crutchfield, and Taylor Godwin. Our students and faculty have consistently participated in this important regional conference for many years, and in consequence, our department has an excellent reputation for scholarship in the regional history and political science community. History students Taylor Hagerdorn, Emily Wheeler, Emily Crutchfield, Blake Knox, Jazmin Wilkerson and others along with political science student Taylor Godwin presented at the Celebration of Scholarship. The Millikin History-Political Science Department remains one of the few, if not the only, undergraduate program in the region to sponsor student presentations at major scholarly conferences. Dr. Kovalcik led a student delegation to the Model UN conference in Chicago in November, successfully shepherding our students. He also taught a public history course in SP16, with Kelby Dolan, that provided students with performance learning opportunities at two museums, Eureka Springs Historical Museum and the Macon County Historical Museum. Students acted as independent contractors and gave each museum professional assistance with exhibits and with their social media presence. They created a short documentary on their experience. The department continues to sponsor, with the hard work of Professor Lusvardi, the Pi Sigma Alpha honors society for Political Science. New members were inducted in 2015-16. Professor Lusvardi took students to the annual Model Illinois Government conference in Springfield; our political science and history students acted as state legislators, working on the floor of the Illinois House in a mock session of the Illinois State Legislature. Dr. Brian Mullgardt continued in his role as coordinator of the Social Science Education major; Dr. Mullgardt wrote our annual education assessment report, dispatched a letter to high school history teachers touting our program, and attended the Illinois Council for Social Studies annual conference. At the latter conference, which Dr. Mullgardt attends at his own expense, Dr. Mullgardt met with high school history teachers to tout our program and urge them to recommend it to their students. Dr. Mullgardt also worked with staff at the Illinois Historic Preservation Agency in Springfield to arrange for our students to act as judges at the annual Illinois History Expo in May 2016. This unique venture brings more than a thousand high school students (and their teachers and parents) to the state capital where they present papers, documentary films, and posters on history topics, which are then judged and given merit awards. Our faculty and students have volunteered as judges. The department has been working with IHPA staff to sponsor an annual award for the best project(s) that will be in effect applied to tuition at Millikin, a great method for drawing the best students in Illinois to our program. The department also arranged for student internships: Lauren Nesbitt had an internship with the Children's Museum in Indianapolis, Indiana, Emily Wheeler worked for the Looking for Lincoln project in Springfield, Taylor Hagerdorn worked for the Lincoln Papers project in Springfield, and Mikayla Mendenhall once again worked with the Macon County Conservation District. Professor Lusvardi arranged internships for students with elected officials, including Congressman Rodney Davis and others. Our internship program is one of the best in the region for undergraduate students. These endeavors are performance learning at its best! History-Political Science continues to be a leading provider of performance learning opportunities at Millikin.

History-Political Science has a strong presence in the Decatur community, and indeed in Central Illinois, a presence that helps draw students to our program and creates opportunities for performance learning for our students. Both Dr. Dan Monroe and Dr. Tim Kovalcik were featured experts on radio programs: Dr. Monroe again appeared on WAZU-FM Peoria to discuss Abraham Lincoln; Dr. Kovalcik appeared on WSOY-AM Decatur to discuss current events. Dr. Sampson organized the 15th annual Father Martin Mangan Lecture on Social Justice which is held each December in Decatur. Once again, Dr. Sampson organized and led the Millikin One Book Project, a reading and discussion group for faculty, staff, students, and friends of the University founded in 2012. History-Political Science is known for community spirit in the Decatur area. We also work to create a caring atmosphere for students in our program. Faculty sponsor a History-Political Science Club that stages meetings over pizza throughout the AY, trips to historic sites, and an annual holiday dinner in December.

Our faculty are also involved in the wider professional community and have growing national reputations in their respective fields. Dr. Monroe spoke on the Sectionalism in Pensacola, Florida, in March, on Sectionalism and Civil War in Melbourne, Florida, in June, and led a conference on Henry Clay in Lexington, Kentucky, also in June 2016. Dr. Mullgardt presented a paper at a national conference at Texas Christian University in Fort Worth, Texas, in November 2015. Dr. Kovalcik was elected vice president of the Illinois Medieval Association and organized the annual conference in February 2016 on the Millikin campus. Dr. Monroe serves on the advisory board of the Illinois State Historical Society and continues to serve on the advisory board of the Journal of Illinois History. Monroe chaired the awards committee of the ISHS and was consequently responsible for the selection process which included recruiting faculty reviewers and tabulating the final results.

History-Political Science faculty have an outstanding publication record (four books and numerous articles and reviews), and that continued in the AY2015-16. Brian Mullgardt has completed a book manuscript titled Renewal and Rebellion: Community Activism, Urban Renewal, and the 1968 Democratic National Convention in Chicago. Bob Sampson is researching a book on baseball in 19th century America, relying on newspapers from the period. Dr. Monroe continued his ongoing work on a memoir of Millikin alum and former congressman Tom Ewing, as well as a biography of President James K. Polk.

All History-Political Science faculty, adjunct and tenure-line, have been instructed to include department learning goals and CAS required language in course syllabi. The department continues to be a leading provider of IN250, IN251, and IN350 courses, and History maintained a high number of students per full time equivalent faculty member. Our faculty offer new and innovative courses virtually every academic year, and last year was no exception. Dr. Monroe offered a course on Ernest Hemingway and the historical context of his work titled Hemingway and the American Century. Dr. Mullgardt offered a new course that includes Reacting to the Past role playing, a first on the Millikin campus, a new pedagogy that is sweeping the humanities. Dr. Mullgardt also taught in the Edge program, and Dr. Kovalcik finished his term on the Council on Faculty as chair. Our new political science professor, Dr. Laura Dean, will be offering new courses in international politics in F16. The department continues work on the Ewing Papers, with Millikin History and Political Science students organizing and cataloging the holdings, an amazing opportunity for hands-on archival work.

History Major Learning Outcome Goals

In each history course, students will:

1. be able to express in oral and written form their understanding of major issues and intellectual theories within the discipline of history
2. demonstrate their ability to research and analyze objectively any historical or social and cultural topic and generate an independent and original point of view
3. demonstrate a historical world view that examines causes and effects of particular events, ideas and time periods.
4. demonstrate their awareness of a global perspective and an appreciation of comparative models, diverse cultural traditions and universal patterns
5. demonstrate their ability to utilize critical and analytical skills in application to any subject

History Major Learning Story

The first-year curriculum in History introduces students to a broad sense of historical developments in the modern world. The second-year curriculum enables students to explore in a more specific manner the history of medieval and modern Europe, and of American history from its beginnings to the present. Third-year courses engage topics in European, American, non-Western, and global history, along with opportunities for independent study. The student's History curriculum culminates in two classes: the Seminar in History (a course in a specific content area, appropriate for juniors or seniors), and Historiography, often taken in the fall semester of the senior year.

The concentration in the History learning experience is on critical analysis – in part because the department is too small to hope to offer comprehensive coverage of anything so broad as “history,” and in part because the History Department's approach makes the discipline intellectually vibrant and culturally relevant to students.

Learning goals are embedded in every class taught by History faculty. Every student is expected to master an increasing level of critical and analytical ability. In a developmental sense, the History Department moves students from survey-level courses, to 300-level content courses, to the seminar and to Historiography, with expectations increasing at each level. The range of courses that is provided in accordance with these expectations is defined by who is in the department at any given time, both full- and part-time.

The range and sequence of courses and learning experiences in the History major includes the following requirements:

- Either History 201 and 202 (Rise of Modern Europe, to and since 1700), or History 203 and 204 (American History, to and since the Civil War);
- Six elective courses, four of which must be at the 300 level or above;
- One 400-level content seminar;
- History 480, Historiography and Research.

Snapshot

In 2015-16 the full time History-Political Science faculty are Dan Monroe, Ph.D. University of Illinois (U.S., Islamic World and Latin America), Timothy Kovalcik, Ph.D. University of Suffolk (Europe and related subjects), Brian Mullgardt, Ph.D. University of Connecticut (U.S. and Social Science Education), Amber Lusvardi, MA, Eastern Illinois University, and joining us in August 2016, Laura Dean, Ph.D. University of Kansas.

Part-time faculty are Robert Sampson, Ph.D. University of Illinois (U.S., British, and Labor), Jennifer Giardina, ABD, University of New Orleans, Scott Reuter, JD, University of Illinois, and Michelle Sanders. All part-time faculty must hold at least an M.A. degree in History or Political Science. All current History faculty hold doctoral degrees from outstanding History programs at nationally ranked universities. The department offers wide-ranging coverage that reflects the broad preparation of its faculty.

In History, majors must complete 33 credits, with greater flexibility available in the “pure” History major’s curriculum. All History majors must complete at least one course in each of three major fields: U.S., Europe, Non-Western or Global. In Political Science, majors must complete 41 credits including an internship and a senior project.

The department offers between 35 and 40 courses per year, and is a major contributor to university requirements at both the sophomore level (IN 250) and junior level (IN 350). About 700 students per year pass through History and Political Science classes at Millikin.

Assessment Methods

Students are assessed in HI 400 Seminar and HI 480 Historiography, since all history majors must take both courses. In the discipline of history, the seminar is typically the capstone course, while historiography provides an important overview of methodology and changing interpretations. Both courses represent an opportunity for a credentialed faculty member to instruct students in a content area that has been a major focus of that faculty member's research and writing. Students are assigned advanced articles and scholarly monographs in the content area and are assessed via essay quizzes. Students also complete a research paper based on primary sources and present that paper to the class in a formal oral defense.

The fall 2015 historiography course enrolled five students. The seminar in the spring 2016 enrolled six students. Dr. Kovalcik taught historiography, while Dr. Mullgardt taught the seminar; the department rotates the faculty assignments to these capstone courses. We have thereby fulfilled our previous goal of exposing students to different professors in the capstone courses. The department chair collected and evaluated five research papers on whether the department's five learning goals were met.

Seminar and Historiography Research Papers

Student papers that met department standards to a high degree were assigned 5 points, those to a moderate degree 3 points, those to an insufficient degree 1 point.

High degree: (5 pts) four students 20 points
Close to High (4 pts) one student 4 points
Moderate degree: (3 pts)
Insufficient degree: (2 or 1 pts)

TOTAL: 24 points/5 = 4.8 average

Political Science Assessment

The department chair adapted the History assessment rubric to political science and collected capstone papers from Professor Amber Lusvardi. Political Science students are required to research and write a senior capstone seminar paper similar to the History seminar paper, though often of greater length and breadth of research. The evaluation of those artifacts produced the following results.

High degree (5 pts) two students	10
Close to high (4 pts) four students	16
Moderate (3 pts) one student	3
Insufficient
Total	29/7 4.14 average

Analysis of Assessment Results

The annual assessment of History produced a higher score than the previous year, 4.8 as opposed to 3.7. This reflects the artifacts submitted from Dr. Mullgardt's seminar and are a tribute to the department's professionalism in mentoring student research. Unfortunately, the Historiography papers were not retained, and the chair will work with Dr. Kovalcik to ensure that they are retained in 2016-17. The data suggests that students overall performed reasonably well on the research paper assignments, and that the department's learning goals are being met. Political Science also had a smaller sample, but the results were again good, consistent with the previous year's score of 4.25, which suggests that seniors are producing excellent capstone papers.

Improvement Plans

The department instituted a formal system of artifact collection whereby papers are retained from the seminar and historiography courses for assessment purposes. The chair collected the relevant artifacts for the purpose of assessing the department's content courses. Assessment is ideally based on BOTH historiography and seminar papers, insuring a robust data sample. This year the Historiography papers were not retained, resulting in a smaller sample than the ideal. The sample for Political Science assessment should be broadened, and in History, the Historiography papers need to be retained. I have been discussing other artifact possibilities with Professor Lusvardi for the next assessment, and I will be working with both Professor Lusvardi and Dr. Dean to analyze the effectiveness of our political science artifact assessment process with an eye to possible revision.

Dr. Brian Mullgardt completed the annual assessment of the Social Science Education major. That report has been forwarded to the CAS dean's office.

History Department Assessment Rubrics

Long Research Paper

Department learning goals are met to a high degree when this paper meets the following criteria:

- *thoroughly researched, with an appropriate, extensive and relevant bibliography
- *clear and original thesis and argument supported by a wide variety of primary (when appropriate) and secondary sources, including journal articles
- *demonstrates a clear understanding of cause and effect in history
- *reflects a high degree of critical thought in making distinctions between and among sources
- *reflects an excellent ability to situate specific content in a relevant body of theory
- *Oral defense reflects an advanced ability to express in oral form an understanding of relevant issues and intellectual theories related to the paper

Department learning goals are met to a moderate degree when this paper meets the following criteria:

- *adequately researched, with an appropriate and relevant bibliography
- *clear thesis and argument supported by a moderate variety of primary (when appropriate) and secondary sources, including journal articles
- *demonstrates an adequate understanding of cause and effect in history
- *reflects some degree of critical thought in making distinctions between and among sources
- *reflects some ability to situate specific content in a relevant body of theory
- *Oral defense reflects some ability to express in oral form an understanding of relevant issues and intellectual theories related to the paper

Department learning goals are met to an insufficient degree when this paper meets the following criteria:

- *inadequately researched, with an incomplete bibliography
- *unclear and unoriginal thesis, with argument inadequately supported by a narrow and limited range of sources
- *does not demonstrate an understanding of cause and effect in history
- *reflects little or no ability to apply critical thought and make distinctions between and among sources
- *reflects little or no ability to situate specific content in a relevant body of theory
- *Oral defense reflects little or no ability to express in oral form an understanding of relevant issues and intellectual theories related to the paper
